Stuart Sampson is a self taught painter based in Edmond, Oklahoma. In his practice, Sampson specializes in portrait painting, creating colorful, expressive portraits of varying subjects. A proud member of the Citizen Potawatomi Nation, his work reflects his love for the culture taught to him by his grandfather.

Stuart's use of bright planes of color and monochromatic backgrounds, emphasize the appearance of his figures. Sampson often paints on wood panels, allowing a hint of the wood texture to show through between brush marks, which adds another inviting element of interest to his work. Sampson's combination of bright color for backgrounds and subdued gradients for facial details add a unique aspect to his work. The use of black, white and grey allows Stuart to capture the faces of his subjects with great sensitivity and expression.
