Virginia Stroud began her art career at a young age, selling her first painting for $3, in the 1960s. While attending Bacone College in Muskogee, Oklahoma, an instructor named Bic West took Stroud under his tutelage and from there she dove into art.

During her lifelong career, Stroud has written and illustrated four children's books, traveled the world teaching art in destinations such as Singapore, and painted works using a variety of techniques.

Stroud's work centers on women and children hoping to create art that embodies motherly love and childlike happiness for both viewers and herself to enjoy.
